PEOPLE & OPERATIONS

Your weekly review should not feel like a trial.

Four rules for a review people do not dread.

Prasad Valluri

Swipe →

RULE ONE

Same time. 30 minutes. Ends on time.

WHY

A meeting that always runs over teaches people to dread it before it starts.

01

RULE TWO

Start with what went right.

WHY

Two minutes on wins, with names. People talk more openly about problems after that.

02

RULE THREE

Review the work, not the person.

- One shared list of projects
- Each one: on track, at risk, or late
- Talk about what blocks it, not who failed

03

RULE FOUR

Every problem leaves with an owner and a date.

THE TEST

Next week starts by checking those dates, before anything new.

04

THE SHORT VERSION

A review should end with a plan, not a verdict.

What one change made your weekly meeting better?

THANKS FOR READING

Prasad Valluri

Operations, people, tech and growth

Follow for weekly notes on running teams in interiors and fit-out.

♻️ Repost if this could help a team you know.